The search page in the app is a way for users to search for accounts, posts, and hashtags. It also has categories to look through and trending topics and events that users can explore. The grid system layout of the page content is modular, since all of the content is styled into two columns with rectangular boxes. The grid system is appropriate for the page because each item in the grid is a trending topic for the user to interact with. The primary changes I made to the screen are the layout of the content, the logo at the top of the screen, and removed the post button on the screen.

The profile page of the app is how the accounts are presented to the user and other users of the app. Users can customize their biographies, profile picture, header, and other information displayed along with the posts that they create. The grid system I used is columnal and is appropriate for the content because the profile information can be seen along with the post content shared by the user still in a familiar way. The primary changes I made are the position of the profile picture, the changes of the profile section titles into icons, and the sizes of the post content on the screen.

The last page I decided to redesign is the page for a post. It allows other users to interact with each other and share their thoughts and other content and media. The grid system I used was columnal, with the post content at the top of the screen and the comment section below. The main changes I made were removing the icons placed under the post to make the screen a bit less crowded, combining the comments into one rectangular section to make them easier to read and require less scrolling to look through them, and moving the icons to the side of the comments for a simpler look.
